

History

step in. stand out.

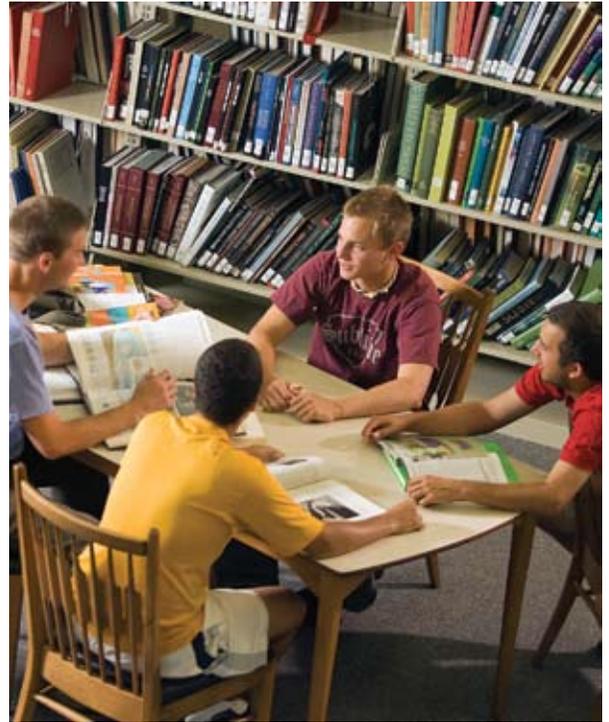

As a history major at Brevard College, you will gain appreciation for the multiple ways in which the past informs the present. You will learn the keys to critical thinking in writing and reading as well as effective presentation skills. You might even live the life of person from the past, at least for a little while, when you participate in a historical re-enactment sponsored by Pastimes, Brevard College's History Club. As a senior, you will create an in-depth reflection on the past, your very own senior project that demonstrates all of the historical skills that you have learned at Brevard College.

The history major is ideal for those who:

- Want to understand how the past impacts the present
- Feel curious about people in the past
- Enjoy hearing stories from family
- Think it would be fun to re-enact past events
- Want to become better writers and critical readers
- Love museums and libraries

Read what a recent graduate said about BC:

"My most rewarding academic experiences here at Brevard have to do with my relationships with faculty, from working with my advisor to plan and make my study abroad dreams come true, to the relationships that I have formed with professors in and outside of the History Department. Those relationships mean so much to me and have helped me to achieve so much here at Brevard."
